AT THE GRAND

Working on the principle that a healthy dose of laughter is the best prescription for a worried world, "The Kid From Kokomo," the new Warner Bros. production which will open at the Grand theatre on Sunday, is comedy from start to finish. A fulsome guarantee that this is so can be had from scanning the list of players and the roles which they play.

Pat O'Brien, is a fight manager and the type of lovable crook that frequently doublecrosses himself. Joan Blondell is his sweetheart, an ex-bubble dancer whose bubble has burst, and their white hope is Wayne Morris, a husky young blacksmith whom they decide to groom for a heavyweight champion.

The Grand is also showing on the same bill the sensational pictures of the fight between Joe Louis and Tony Galento taken at the ringside last Wednesday evening.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"Is Swing On Its Way Out?" Conservatives and classicists say yes. "Jitterbugs"—and they outnumber the others—say NO. The latter, not bothering to build up a case, simply point to Paramount's swing-romance, "Some Like It Hot," Sunday at the Cliftona theatre, starring Bob Hope, Shirley Ross and the "king of the hide-beaters," Gene Krupa. That's sufficient proof, they contend, that swing is more popular than ever before.

GENE KRUPA

Chief spokesman of swing's permanency is Gene Krupa himself, who says that swing is America's first contribution to original music.

"All the talk about 'jitterbug,'" says the apostle of swing, "has created the impression among sincere music lovers that swing is a slap-bang affair. That isn't the case at all. Swing bands play swing softly, and when the 'ickies'—that is, the uninitiated—hear it, they don't realize what it is.

"Swing is American folk music with an instinctive appeal to Americans. Swing music as we know it is just in its infancy. More than anything else, it is a way of playing, getting a lift or a swing into rhythms, and improvising around them. What it will ultimately become no one knows, but it's getting better all the time."

DES MOINES, Ia.—Conservation officials expect more than three million persons to visit Iowa's state parks this Summer. Iowa has 71 state parks totalling 18,548 acres, 21 forests preserves, 65 meandered lakes, and 17 artificial lakes.

Sprayed Orchards Show
Few Blemishes
On Fruit

COLUMBUS, July 30—An Ohio apple crop above the average in size appears probable unless some unforeseen factor appears, and the fruit appears to be quite free from blemishes in sprayed orchards, according to T. H. Parks, extension specialist, Ohio State university.

Mr. Parks has been checking orchards throughout the state to determine how efficient the recommendations made by himself and by Dr. C. C. Allison, Ohio State university, have been in controlling insects and diseases. Apple blight thinned the set of fruit on Jonathan, Yellow Transparent, and Wagner in some sections but even the two latter varieties are carrying a 60 percent crop.

An excellent period of weather during the blossoming period permitted the maximum of pollination work by insects but Stayman Winesap has a light set of fruit. This variety needs special attention when set in orchards so that a sufficient number of other trees to furnish pollen are interplanted with the Stayman Winesaps.

Apple scab has been well controlled in sprayed orchards although symptoms of the disease were plentiful on both leaves and fruit in an unsprayed orchard. Apple scab apparently was more prevalent in the southern than in the northern part of the state.

Few of the apples show curculio stings. The sprays for codling moth protection are not completed but apples show little damage from the first brood of the moth. Many trees have only two or three apples showing codling moth injury.

Varieties such as Golden Delicious, Rome Beauty, Wealthy, Baldwin, and Winter Banana are carrying such a heavy load of fruit that thinning will be profitable. Most orchard owners begin the thinning operation as soon as the natural June drop of fruit is well under way.

Hail had injured fruit in one orchard, and such damage increases the difficulty of controlling codling moth attacks. Bruised places on the fruit furnish the codling moth larvae easy means of entrance. Hail storms are very local in character and sometimes only a portion of one orchard is damaged.

DEFINITE progress may be made in infusing some action into a crystallized or static state of affairs, judging by the lunar transits. But it will take patient endeavor, hard work and sound policies to move stagnant matters out of a rut. Also, there is a menace of deception, fraud or some undercover situation to be handled with discretion and shrewdness. In meeting this subtle problem take care not to make extravagant promises. Purely personal interests likewise demand vigilance.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which definite progress may be made by industry, application and sound judgment. This is a way of infusing new life into old, lagging and congested business or property interests. Old investments or "frozen assets" may respond to new stimuli. But be alert to fraud and treachery.

A child born on this day, while having much depth and native stability, may be easily lured into doubtful or curious entanglements, both in business associations and in its private life.

CROSBY'S BAND INCORPORATED
Bob Crosby's Dixieland Swing band heard Tuesdays, at 8:30 p. m. over CBS, is incorporated for one of the most unusual reasons in the world. Not money, not high finance, but style protection is the basis of Bob Crosby, Inc. The seven men in the Crosby corporation are Bob, himself, Gil Rodin, Ray Bauduc, Nappy LeMare, Eddie Miller, Bob Haggart, and Matty Matlock. The corporation meets once a week to talk about the band, its plans, its music and its style. Formal votes are never taken on any question—decisions are always the result of a consensus. Originally, the corporation was made up of Crosby and the five men formerly with Ben Pollack's band. Idea was to maintain the free Dixieland swing style which characterizes Crosby's particular brand of jive. Haggart became the seventh corporation member recently when he was named arranger for the crew.

BLONDIE RADIO SERIES
There's a well known rule in radio writing as to the best means of arousing and sustaining suspense. It is this: "Get your hero into hot water and keep him there." That rule has been faithfully followed in preparation for the airing of "Blondie," a comedy serial based on Chic Young's famous comic strip and unveiled for the radio audience on Monday, July 3, over CBS. In "Blondie," with Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake of Hollywood playing the principal roles, the suspense will be intense and hilarious.

ALEC TEMPLETON

celebration when the sponsors of the Fibber McGee and Molly programs unveil their new Summer series on Tuesday, July 4.

Birthday of the country, birthday of the program, the day also marks the birthday of the star of the series, brilliant young pianist Alec Templeton. To make an even quartet, Templeton and his cohorts—Conrad Nagel, Edna Odell, Billy Mills and his orchestra—plan a toast to yet another July 4 birthday celebrant, George M. Cohan, in the guise of a medley of his patriotic tunes, "You're a Grand Old Flag," "Stand Up and Fight," and "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy."

RUTH CHATTERTON
Ruth Chatterton, famous stage and screen star, begins a three weeks starring engagement on "Big Sister," Tuesday, July 4, via CBS at 10:30 a. m. Signing of Miss Chatterton for a three weeks stay marks the introduction of bigtime names in daytime script shows.

AMANDA
Mr. and Mrs. Ira Griffith, daughters Marie and Esther, Hugh May of Basil, Edgar and Carrie Conrad were Sunday dinner guests Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Smith, Mrs. W. R. Smith of Lancaster, Miss Valeria Martin and Charles Martin of Columbus. A quiet ceremony read at 10:30 a. m. June 15 by Rev. E. G. Corwin, in the First Methodist church Mansfield, united in marriage Miss Zada Bogle and Mr. Fred Reed. Miss Bogle, daughter of Mr. and

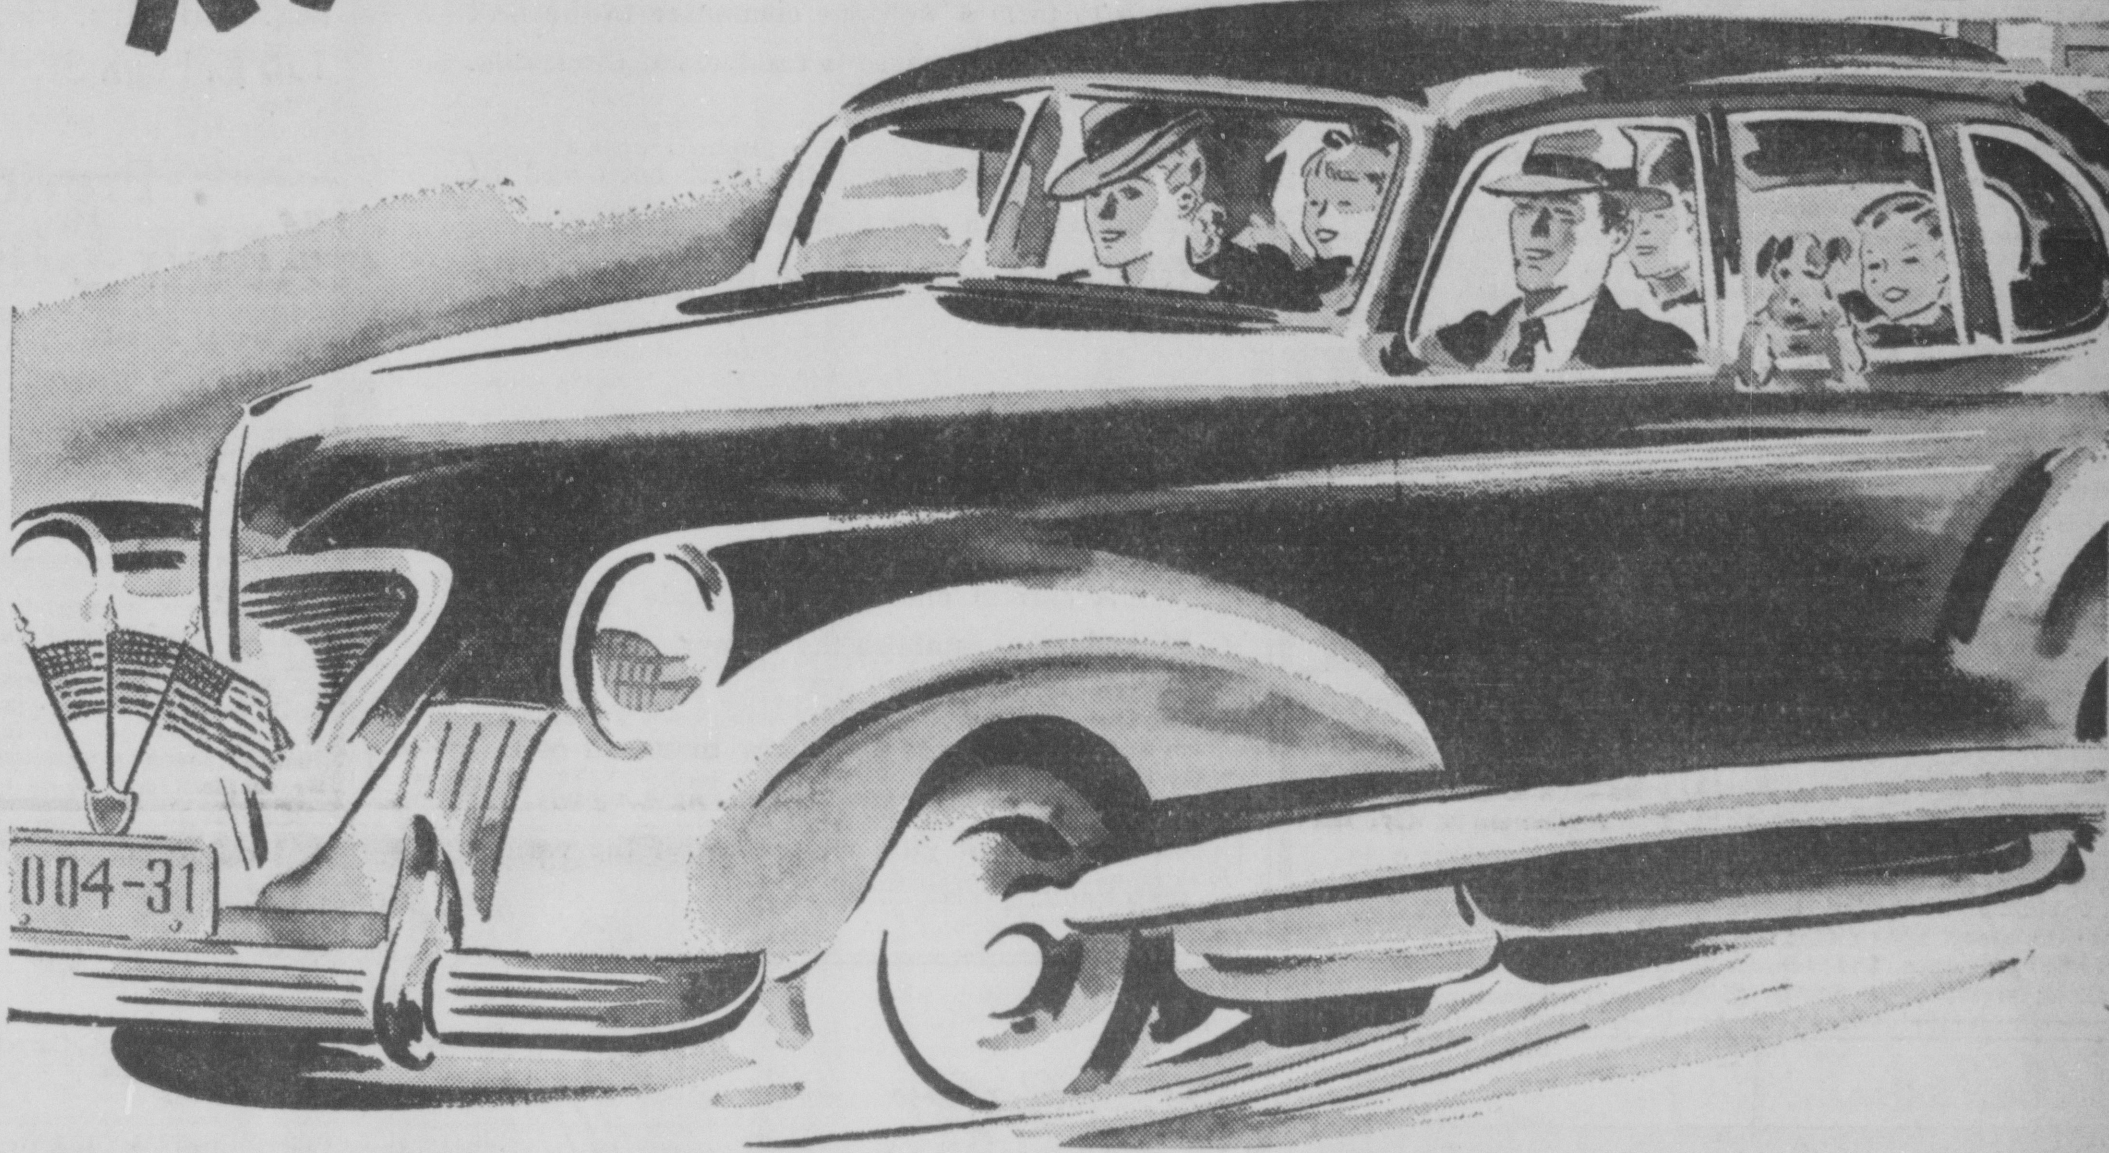

Mrs. Harry Phillips Bogle, Pana, Ill., wore a rose man-tailored suit with white accessories and corsage of pink roses and blue delphinium for her marriage. Mrs. Gail Reed, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. She wore an orchid and white costume with a corsage of pink roses. She came to Mansfield from Amanda with Mr. Reed's parents Mr. and Mrs. George Reed who were there for the ceremony. Mr. Richard Geiselman of Loudonville was best man. The bride is employed at the Vogue dress shop, Mansfield, and Mr. Reed is an office employee of the Greyhound Bus Lines, in Mansfield. Following a breakfast for the bridal party and the bridegroom's parents at the Schwarz tavern on Lexington avenue, the couple left for a western trip.

They will visit Mrs. Reed's parents in Illinois, go to Chicago and visit the bridegroom's parents at Amanda before returning to Mansfield. They will make their home at 195 West Fourth street.

12 ISSUES MAY BE PUT BEFORE VOTERS OF OHIO

Questions To Depend On Number Of Signers, Filing Speed

GRIFFITH LISTS FACTS

Adjutant General's Tenure One Of Important Problems

Twelve special proposals may be submitted to voters at the November election if sufficient signatures are obtained on petitions now in circulation in the state.

Initiative petitions for the submission of nine amendments to the Ohio Constitution, two proposals to repeal laws enacted by the legislature and one initiating new legislation have been filed with Earl Griffith, secretary of state.

If the required number of signatures are secured, and the petitions filed not later than Aug. 8, and the legality of the signatures approved by the secretary of state, the proposals will be placed on the ballot for the Nov. 7 election. The proposed amendments to the constitution will require 250,000 signatures. The petitions will be referred to the various county board of elections to be checked.

The amendments include:

1. A proposed amendment which would make possible the passage of bond issues by any subdivision of the state of Ohio, by a majority of the electors voting on such issue.
2. Initiative petition proposing two amendments to the Constitution—(1) amendment providing a self-effective system of old age pensions in the form of a guarantee of an income of $50 monthly to every person of the age of 60 years or over; (2) providing that the signatures of 100,000 electors at large shall be sufficient upon a petition to bring to popular vote a constitutional amendment, 50,000 signatures for the proposal of a law.
3. To make uniform interest rate charged by banks, building and loan associations, etc., by establishing a maximum rate of six percent per year. The rate charged by chattel loan companies shall not exceed one percent per month on sums up to $300.
4. Providing for the tax exemption of homes occupied by the owner up to and including five thousand dollars in value.
5. Prohibits the sales tax or excise tax except upon motor fuel, alcoholic beverages and tobacco products; prohibits the taxing of real estate and personal property; provides for the taxing of net incomes at a scale of rates graduated in proportion to the amounts thereof.

6. Provides a graduated license tax upon all chain stores.
7. Prohibiting the imposition of any excise tax on the sale of any commodities except motor vehicle fuel.
8. To establish a general assembly consisting of one house—instead of the senate and house, as now provided.
9. To limit, and, or restrict, the collection of excise tax in all retail sales of motor vehicles, where part payment of the purchase one motor vehicle is accepted as price of the other.

The following proposals to repeal laws recently enacted by the legislature will each require approximately 150,000 signatures of qualified voters before presentation to the secretary of state for his approval:

- 1—(Amended Senate Bill No. 181)—Relative to associations for providing care in hospitals and sanatoriums. Petitions containing the required number of signatures must be filed on or before July 11, otherwise the new law will go into force and effect on that date.
- 2—(House Bill No. 336) — To repeal Sec. 5276 of the General Code and leave life tenure in office to the state adjutant general and his assistants. July 18th is the deadline for this petition. Should petitions containing the required number of signatures (approximately 150,000) be filed on this date, the old life-tenure law will remain in effect until the November election.

The present adjutant general and his assistants will remain in office their life time, should the referendum receive a majority of votes cast at the election. In case the petitions being circulated by friends of the adjutant general and his assistants, now in office, fail to secure the necessary 150,000 signers on or before July 18, the new act repealing the old life-tenure law, will go into effect on that date, the adjutant general and his assistants will be out of office and their successors will be appointed to serve during the Governor's term in office only, instead of life, as provided in the old law. Among Columbus voters, those opposing a life-tenure in public office are refusing to sign the petitions.

Initiative petitions for the submission of nine amendments to the Ohio Constitution, two proposals to repeal laws enacted by the legislature and one initiating new legislation have been filed with Earl Griffith, secretary of state.

If the required number of signatures are secured, and the petitions filed not later than Aug. 8, and the legality of the signatures approved by the secretary of state, the proposals will be placed on the ballot for the Nov. 7 election. The proposed amendments to the constitution will require 250,000 signatures. The petitions will be referred to the various county board of elections to be checked.

The amendments include:
1. A proposed amendment which would make possible the passage of bond issues by any subdivision of the state of Ohio, by a majority of the electors voting on such issue.

2. Initiative petition proposing two amendments to the Constitution—(1) amendment providing a self-effective system of old age pensions in the form of a guarantee of an income of $50 monthly to every person of the age of 60 years or over; (2) providing that the signatures of 100,000 electors at large shall be sufficient upon a petition to bring to popular vote a constitutional amendment, 50,000 signatures for the proposal of a law.

3. To make uniform interest rate charged by banks, building and loan associations, etc., by establishing a maximum rate of six percent per year. The rate charged by chattel loan companies shall not exceed one percent per month on sums up to $300.

4. Providing for the tax exemption of homes occupied by the owner up to and including five thousand dollars in value.

5. Prohibits the sales tax or excise tax except upon motor fuel, alcoholic beverages and tobacco products; prohibits the taxing of real estate and personal property; provides for the taxing of net incomes at a scale of rates graduated in proportion to the amounts thereof.

6. Provides a graduated license tax upon all chain stores.

7. Prohibiting the imposition of any excise tax on the sale of any commodities except motor vehicle fuel.

8. To establish a general assembly consisting of one house—instead of the senate and house, as now provided.

9. To limit, and, or restrict, the collection of excise tax in all retail sales of motor vehicles, where part payment of the purchase of one motor vehicle is accepted as price of the other.

The following proposals to repeal laws recently enacted by the legislature will each require approximately 150,000 signatures of qualified voters before presentation to the secretary of state for his approval:

1—(Amended Senate Bill No. 181)—Relative to associations for providing care in hospitals and sanatoriums. Petitions containing the required number of signatures must be filed on or before July 11, otherwise the new law will go into force and effect on that date.

2—(House Bill No. 336)—To repeal Sec. 5276 of the General Code and leave life tenure in office to the state adjutant general and his assistants. July 18th is the deadline for this petition. Should petitions containing the required number of signatures (approximately 150,000) be filed on this date, the old life-tenure law will remain in effect until the November election.

The present adjutant general and his assistants will remain in office their life time, should the referendum receive a majority of votes cast at the election. In case the petitions being circulated by friends of the adjutant general and his assistants, now in office, fail to secure the necessary 150,000 signatures on or before July 18, the new act repealing the old life-tenure law, will go into effect on that date, the adjutant general and his assistants will be out of office and their successors will be appointed to serve during the Governor's term in office only, instead of life, as provided in the old law. Among Columbus voters, those opposing a life-tenure in public office are refusing to sign the petitions.

SEASONAL RUSH

TO HOLIDAY AUTOISTS

FRIENDS: "Be Alive on the Fifth!" Today I call on every citizen and public official in Circleville and Pickaway county to unite in an effort to cut down the annual Fourth of July accident toll. If history repeats itself the holiday will bring a national catastrophe to the United States. Many will be killed and injured. Children will be maimed for life. Why? Because each year Americans choose Independence Day to stage a jamboree of carelessness. On the highways, in the homes, on the beach and picnic grounds men, women and children are killed off by the score, even as they celebrate. Traffic crashes, drownings and fireworks are the chief instruments of death on this occasion. There is no rhyme or reason to this wholesale slaughter. It must be stopped. Last July 8,720 Americans were killed in accidents—more than twice as many as died in the Revolutionary war. Ironically, a big part of the July death toll comes from the celebration of the Independence gained in that war. The number of fatal accidents in July has been reduced in recent years, but we still have a long way to go in making July a truly safe month—one whose holiday and vacation days will not be marred by tragedy that can be prevented. This calls for cooperation from everyone—the driver and the pedestrian.

World At A Glance

A HIGHLY intelligent reader of mine writes in to take issue with me concerning a comparison I recently made between Communism, Facism and Nazi-ism on the one hand and A. P. A.-ism and K. K. K.-ism on the other. I know he's intelligent, for one reason, because, though he mildly disagrees with me as to this particular matter, he nevertheless says I'm his favorite columnist. Aside from that he made some remarks that strike me as exceedingly well worth consideration.

My original thesis was that A. P. A.-ism, K. K. K.-ism and Know-Nothing-ism, long before them, were "isms" of our American own, which, although respectively pretty formidable for awhile, petered out in due season and now are in a state of what Grover Cleveland called "inocuous desuetude."

The question I raised was: "Won't Communism, Facism and Nazi-ism finally frazzle out similarly?"

QUITE A DIFFERENCE

"Ah," rejoins my reader, "but you forget to mention that these 'isms' of our never were entrenched in our government. And neither did any of our Know Nothings, A. P. A.'s and Kluxers ever attempt to propagandize their hope in foreign countries. "Communism, Facism and

Nazi-ism, however, are governmentalized in Russia, Italy and Germany, and their 'bunds' and things unmistakably are doing their best to 'horn in' in our midst.

"Just so long as they're rampant in Europe they'll plague us until we eradicate their branches."

Right here my reader injects a bit of extremely snappy comment.

"It will be mighty difficult," he says, "for a country like the U. S. A. to do this eradicating, because we believe in free speech. If we tried to indulge in some democratic propagandizing in Russia, Italy or Germany, Stalin, Mussolini or Hitler could squelch it in jig time. That's one of the advantages of a dictatorship — from the standpoint of the dictators and their supporters. But here we have our compunctions about 'liquidating' an agitator, no matter how much we may dislike the cause he's agitating for."

It's true enough. We can deport agents from overseas, but we can't easily muzzle American-born Communists, Facists and Nazis, even if they're inspired from Moscow, Rome or Berlin.

Perhaps their out-and-out organizations can be extinguished, but their individual spokesmanship can't readily be extinguished, no matter where it's financed from. An alien disturber can be dealt with, but an American hyphenate's a different proposition. If he merely propagandizes, without starting anything physically, the constitution makes him very hard to handle.

AUTOCRACY VERSUS DEMOCRACY

My reader by no means is hopeless, though.

He reasons that, in the nature of things, a dictatorship can't last long.

"A Stalin, a Mussolini or a Hitler can't live forever," he observes, "and generally he doesn't leave an heir with the 'old man's' qualifications. A competent dictator can't be picked up at any old time, either. When a dictator is assassinated or dies voluntarily, the next chap in line seldom lasts more than a year or two. Then the whole dictatorship disintegrates."

"A democracy doesn't blow up abruptly."

"Government by the people doesn't die and can't be killed. Generation follows generation gradually. When a dictator passes, the chances are that he'll leave no able successor. There always are plenty of people to succeed their preceding people."

So, cheer up, advises my reader. Democracy'll win out in the long run.

DIET AND HEALTH

More Liberal Diet for Baby

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE GROWING infant's diet is recommended to be more liberal than was formerly thought necessary. Cereals and other semi-solid foods are added now very early, whether the baby is on mother's milk or not. One of the most important improvements in artificial feeding resulted from the discovery that cow's milk, very often mother's milk, is deficient in iron. Many pediatricians give infants small doses of iron from the very beginning, thus reducing the incidence of anemia.

At six weeks of age the baby should have orange juice, one-half ounce in half an ounce of water, sweetened and fed with a spoon once a day. Cod liver oil, a teaspoonful, should be given once a day before a feeding. This is increased as time goes on to three teaspoonfuls.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

As early as two months, according to good authority, certainly in the third and fourth month, the baby should have a cereal. Any nutritious cereal will do—cream of wheat, oatmeal or corn mush. It should be cooked at least an hour, fed with boiled milk, warm, sweetened with ordinary cane sugar.

Vegetable Soup

At five months add some vegetable soup to the baby's menu. This should contain some lean chopped meat and chopped carrots, barley and rice enough to cook it into a soup.

At nine to ten months the milk formula can be changed to whole milk with no added sugar. A soft-boiled egg yolk should be added once a day or every other day.

The time schedule now will go as follows:

6 a.m.—eight ounces of milk.

9 a.m.—one ounce of orange juice, diluted with one ounce of water.

10 a.m.—eight ounces of milk, one to two heaping tablespoonfuls of cooked cereal; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

2 p.m.—six to eight ounces of milk; egg yolk, or vegetable soup; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

6 p.m.—eight ounces of milk; one to two heaping tablespoonfuls of cereal; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

10 to 12 p.m.—eight ounces of milk, if hungry.

At ten months include gelatin and custard.

At one year, bacon, scraped beef or finely-divided calves', beef or lamb's liver can be added.

Essential Foods

From now on remember the essential foods for the infant and child are milk, meat, fruit, eggs, vegetables. Candy and concentrated sweets are to be strictly avoided. They spoil the appetite and keep the child from eating foods that are essential to health.

The commonest error in children's (over one year) diet is to give too much carbohydrate—sugar and starch; too much cereal, bread, potatoes and puddings, etc. This means that the child does not get enough minerals and vitamins.

The next commonest error in feeding the child of a year or more is the feeding of too much milk. This may sound peculiar after all the insistence on the value of milk. But too much milk to children from one year to six years means poor appetite, and they are anemic and irritable.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diets," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE
AS BOB became better he grew more and more impatient to be off. Sarah Anne discovered that he had been everywhere. He had gone to boarding school in England, had two years at Princeton before the aviation school, and he had met the Duke of Windsor twice when the duke was the king. Once, as a boy, he had visited at the White House with his father for a night.

These things came out quite casually, but to Sarah Anne, whose world was bordered by Chicago on the north, Ohio on the east, Kentucky to the south and Illinois to the west, they raised a barrier. Bob, however, did not sense it.

"Not that I slept the night I spent in the White House," he said. "I slid down the bannisters until a detective stopped me. They were the slipperiest bannisters I've ever slid down."

So a week passed. Then, just as a tray with iced tea, tall glasses and water cress sandwiches was being placed on the veranda one tea-time, Bernice came. She was wearing a navy suit with white pique accents, and her pillbox hat was crisp pique, too. Over the brief suit jacket she had thrown a cape of silver fox.

Sarah Anne, coming to the veranda with a dish of lemon rings spiced with cloves, saw her, and heard the silvery voice say:

"Darling, you're nearly well! How heavenly! And Bob, dear, please, I'd like a preacher to say some magic words. Now!"

Sarah Anne did not open the screen door. She went down the walk, stopping only to pick up her purse. She had seen something lovely begin and end. And it was foolish to be upset because she and Bob were merely officially engaged. They didn't even pretend. She thought Bob called her name, but she did not look back.

If Bob and Bernice were married now, they would go away. Let Mrs. Allen, Miss Sarah and Miss Anne talk about man's inconstancy and hand her their pale pity! Let her father watch her curiously for the second time that summer. She could explain to him.

However, it was nonsense for poets to say that hearts broke only once. Hearts had a wonderful resiliency. They healed themselves and cracked again.

Only she knew that the first agony had come from the passing of something that was little better than a dream. She had pinned her shining wings to Jack's shoulders and expected them to fit. But Bob, who never had said he loved her and whom she couldn't really love, was making a shambles out of her emotions.

She came to the gate and paused, for a car was slowing down. A long wire and chromium roadster stopped as though it knew that parking place well. It was Lynn who called to her.

"A new car!" she exclaimed, glad to escape into the material. "You must be getting a dollar a word. The old one was nice enough."

"Sort of out of order after it rambled off the other night." He climbed out. "Going far? Can I take you?"

"I'm just aimlessly wandering. Corrinne isn't around. I'm sorry." She was glad, though. She wanted to know why this handsome stranger was working such a spell on her sister. Maybe he himself didn't realize it, she reasoned honestly.

"I know. She's away for the day at a sorority picnic, isn't she?" "You know her social calendar better than I do."

"She told me. How about getting a coat and hat and eating dinner with me somewhere? I'm at loose ends and just trusted to luck. Corrinne would be back. You've been so engrossed with that flyer, you've waved goodbye lately."

Merely because she wanted to escape that scene on the veranda, Sarah Anne answered: "Suppose you get my coat and hat in the hall. I'm as free tonight as the air at a filling station."

When Lynn brought her the wraps she laughed lightly. "Lynn dear, this is Corrinne's white polo coat and this is the child's most intriguing picture hat! But I'll accept the loan." She snapped the black velvet chin band at the side of her cheek and slipped into the coat.

"This is luck," Lynn answered. "I like you, Sarah Anne. Like. It's a good, solid word."

"I know, like flannels and spinach and American history. Look, the rain is beginning again. But that's all right. I prefer wet driving."

Now if the thunder would crash, the lightning would flash, and the clouds would burst, she might have a very enjoyable evening. She would be gay! She might even be flirtatious. Why not? Nothing meant anything to a man, anyway. She would make a blacklist and on it she would place all men who had rough, bright hair, teasing voices, impudent grins. She would give four stars to any of them who drove airplanes instead of chromium and maroon roadsters—four stars for intelligibility.

They were finishing dinner, in a hotel dining room, when Lynn spoke in a guarded voice. "Sarah Anne, there are four men at a corner table who are watching me. Friends of Punk's, no doubt. I'd like to give them the slip. You sit tight, while I pretend to leave. I'll circle around and be back after they get the idea I've walked out on you."

Sarah Anne, in that moment, was not conscious that she was picking up the thread of the events of the night when Lynn's car had disappeared. Punk Edwards had broken into the parsonage, and she and Bob had been drugged. She merely knew that Lynn's life held excitement around its fringes.

Sitting in the hotel dining room, listening to an orchestra that sent a lulling happy song across the candle-light tables, Sarah Anne felt curiously at peace. It was a good feeling—a sense of having been deserted by everyone and not particularly caring. She must foster it and be independent.

She glanced into her small beaded purse. She had some change and a postage stamp. Oh, yes, her imp from Lincoln cathedral. A classmate, traveling in England one summer, had brought the minute silver token from an old silversmith whose shop stood near the bridge beyond the great church.

"Guard it, Sarah Anne," she had said. "It stands for luck—or at least protection."

She fingered the good luck piece. Lucky? She had been comfortably happy in her hypothesis of a world until lately. No miracles or orchids or headline happenings, though.

The flute and the clarinet were weaving a tapestry of sound now, and the low voices in the dining room grew quiet. Her thoughts patterned themselves to the music. She had watched doors opening, heard them swing shut. She was not fickle, she reminded herself. After all, she had reserved the best seat in her mental gallery for Jack all these years. But she wished she knew why Bob had sat down in it as soon as Jack stood up.

The little imp, so slippery and small, slipped through her fingers. She reached for it, but it went on ahead. There was a crack in the floor and it disappeared. She gazed at the spot curiously. Her good luck token was getting away. Well, a waiter would salvage it. She motioned. But before the attendant reached the table Lynn was back. He hurriedly placed some silver on the table and reached for her arm.

"We're sort of hurrying, my sweet. That man whom you don't like and I don't like is around."

The car ate up the miles, and the motor hummed against the wind and the rain. But Sarah Anne was thinking that maybe by now Bob was married to Bernice. Maybe everyone knew what a fool she had been. If only she need never face anyone. If she could roll down the night, never finding morning and reality. Her independent feeling had deserted her.

Lynn was swinging the car through an old gate and it wobbled on a rough uneven country road. Trees leaned over the path, and that path went deeper and deeper into a forest.

"Where are we going?" she asked.

"To a place I know. You don't mind, do you?"

"I'm afraid I do. It's dark and frightening."

"Sorry. Hold on now. The next lap is bumpy."

It was. The car shot from side to side of the road. Finally Lynn plunged aside, stopped, switched off the lights. "You're here."

"We're where?"

"At a club I know. Private one."

"It's dark. And what do we do?"

"Get acquainted." His arm reached for her and she slipped away. He moved back at once.

"Sorry, I always have liked you better than I should have."

"Hahn! We better go back?"

He looked at her, though the darkness hid the gaze.

"We can't go back, Sarah Anne. I won't stall any longer. That gaze is watched, and we're lucky to be here. Very, very lucky!"

SEASONAL RUSH

TO HOLIDAY AUTOISTS

FRIENDS: "Be Alive on the Fifth!" Today I call on every citizen and public official in Circleville and Pickaway county to unite in an effort to cut down the annual Fourth of July accident toll. If history repeats itself the holiday will bring a national catastrophe to the United States. Many will be killed and injured. Children will be maimed for life. Why? Because each year Americans choose Independence Day to stage a jamboree of carelessness. On the highways, in the homes, on the beach and picnic grounds men, women and children are killed off by the score, even as they celebrate. Traffic crashes, drownings and fireworks are the chief instruments of death on this occasion. There is no rhyme or reason to this wholesale slaughter. It must be stopped. Last July 8,720 Americans were killed in accidents—more than twice as many as died in the Revolutionary war. Ironically, a big part of the July death toll comes from the celebration of the Independence gained in that war. The number of fatal accidents in July has been reduced in recent years, but we still have a long way to go in making July a truly safe month—one whose holiday and vacation days will not be marred by tragedy that can be prevented. This calls for cooperation from everyone—the driver and the pedestrian.

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

A HIGHLY intelligent reader of mine writes in to take issue with me concerning a comparison I recently made between Communism, Fascism and Naziism on the one hand and A. P. A.-ism and K. K. K.-ism on the other. I know he's intelligent, for one reason, because, though he mildly disagrees with me as to this particular matter, he nevertheless says I'm his favorite columnist. Aside from that he made some remarks that strike me as exceedingly well worth consideration.

My original thesis was that A. P. A.-ism, K. K. K.-ism and Know-Nothingism, long before them, were "isms" of our American own, which, although respectively pretty formidable for awhile, petered out in due season and now are in a state of what Grover Cleveland called "inocuous desuetude."

The question I raised was: "Won't Communism, Fascism and Naziism finally frazzle out similarly?"

QUITE A DIFFERENCE

"Ah," rejoins my reader, "but you forget to mention that these 'isms' of our never were entrenched in our government. And neither did any of our Know Nothings, A. P. A.'s and Kluxers ever attempt to propagandize their dope in foreign countries."

Naziism, however, are governmentalized in Russia, Italy and Germany, and their 'bunds' and things unmistakably are doing their best to 'horn in' in our midst.

"Just so long as they're rampant in Europe they'll plague us," we eradicate their branches."

Right here my reader injects a bit of extremely snappy comment.

"It will be mighty difficult," he says, "for a country like U. S. A. to do this eradicating, because we believe in free speech. If we tried to indulge in some democratic propagandizing in Russia, Italy or Germany, Stalin, Mussolini or Hitler could squelch it in jig time. That's one of the advantages of a dictatorship — from the standpoint of the dictators and their supporters. But here we have our compunctions about 'liquidating' an agitator, no matter how much we may dislike the cause he's agitating for."

It's true enough. We can deport agents from overseas, but we can't easily muzzle American-born Communists, Fascists and Nazis, even if they're inspired from Moscow, Rome or Berlin. Perhaps their out-and-out organizations can be extinguished, but their individual spokesman can't readily be extinguished, no matter where it's financed

It calls for thought and consideration for the next fellow. This mass slaughter on Independence Day can be stopped by each and every one of us using caution and common sense. The things that cause these tragedies are things we can control—haste, selfishness, thoughtlessness, the desire to show off. I call on all to stop this mid-Summer massacre by signing a new Declaration of Independence—Independence from annual tribute of thousands of American lives needlessly sacrificed... independence from the kind of celebration that leaves us the dead and the sightless and the suffering.

TO PUMPKIN SHOW DIRECTORS

GENTLEMEN: You will meet Monday evening to discuss further plans for the 1939 Pumpkin Show to be held Oct. 18, 19, 20 and 21. At the last meeting there was considerable discussion of plans to change many departments of the show, rearrange some exhibits, eliminate some free acts, and, in general, give the show a complete overhauling. I doubt the wisdom of some of your plans. Free acts are an important part of the celebration. Elimination of some of the acts may be foolish economy. There are some parades that could and should be eliminated due to the lack of interest in them. The show needs some modernizing, but too many changes should not be made this year. Remember the Pumpkin Show has been very successful in its old form. Weather conditions have reduced the income. The crowds were here when weather conditions permitted.

TO SAFETY DEPARTMENT

SIRS: The other evening after I read that a motorist had been fined for failing to observe the regulation which calls for a stop at High street when one is driving on Pickaway street, I decided to do a little checking to determine just how many times in 30 minutes this ordinance is violated. In 33 cars that passed the busy intersection only four stopped. The other 29 went on as though there was no law that called for even a moment's hesitation when traveling over this highway. Most motorists take for granted that Pickaway should be the through street; others seem to believe that there is no reason for them to observe a stop there. It seems strange that since this stop street ordinance has been in effect only one motorist should be ordered into court and asked to post bond for violating the law. A traffic officer could pay his salary many times over by checking this corner and citing the persons driving on Pickaway street who fail to stop before crossing High. Agitation has been started to have the stop street ordinance revised; the matter has even reached council, but nothing has been done about it. I think it is time to eliminate the injustice that this regulation causes. A check of traffic over the various busy thoroughfares by competent persons and proper marking a fair distance from the intersections would do much to solve the problem. I believe, too, that the fellow who put up $2 bond to appear on the charge should receive a refund unless you decide to do a lot more ordering into court for the same violation.

DIET AND HEALTH

More Liberal Diet for Baby

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE GROWING infant's diet is recommended to be more liberal than was formerly thought necessary. Cereals and other semi-solid foods are added now very early, whether the baby is on mother's milk or not. One of the most important improvements in artificial feeding resulted from the discovery that cow's milk, very often mother's milk, is deficient in iron. Many pediatricians give infants small doses of iron from the very beginning, thus reducing the incidence of anemia.

At six weeks of age the baby should have orange juice, one-half ounce in half an ounce of water, sweetened and fed with a spoon once a day. Cod liver oil, a teaspoonful, should be given once a day before a feeding. This is increased as time goes on to three teaspoonfuls.

As early as two months, according to good authority, certainly in the third and fourth month, the baby should have a cereal. Any nutritious cereal will do—cream of wheat, oatmeal or corn mush. It should be cooked at least an hour, fed with boiled milk, warm, sweetened with ordinary cane sugar.

Vegetable Soup

At five months add some vegetable soup to the baby's menu. This should contain some lean chopped meat and chopped carrots, barley and rice enough to cook it into a soup.

At nine to ten months the milk formula can be changed to whole milk with no added sugar. A soft-boiled egg yolk should be added once a day or every other day.

The time schedule now will go as follows:

6 a.m.—eight ounces of milk.

9 a.m.—one ounce of orange juice, diluted with one ounce of water.

10 a.m.—eight ounces of milk, one to two heaping tablespoonfuls of cooked cereal; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

2 p.m.—six to eight ounces of milk; egg yolk, or vegetable soup; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

6 p.m.—eight ounces of milk; one to two heaping tablespoonfuls of cereal; one teaspoonful of cod liver oil.

10 to 12 p.m.—eight ounces of milk, if hungry.

At ten months include gelatin and custard.

At one year, bacon, scraped beef or finely-divided calves', beef or lamb's liver can be added.

Essential Foods

From now on remember the essential foods for the infant and child are milk, meat, fruit, eggs, vegetables. Candy and concentrated sweets are to be strictly avoided. They spoil the appetite and keep the child from eating foods that are essential to health.

The commonest error in children's (over one year) diet is to give too much carbohydrate—sugar and starch; too much cereal, bread, potatoes and puddings, etc. This means that the child does not get enough minerals and vitamins.

The next commonest error in feeding the child of a year or more is the feeding of too much milk. This may sound peculiar after all the insistence on the value of milk. But too much milk to children from one year to six years means poor appetite, and they are anemic and irritable.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

AS BOB became better he grew more and more impatient to be off. Sarah Anne discovered that he had been everywhere. He had gone to boarding school in England, had two years at Princeton before the aviation school, and he had met the Duke of Windsor twice when the duke was the king. Once, as a boy, he had visited at the White House with his father for a night.

These things came out quite casually, but to Sarah Anne, whose world was bordered by Chicago on the north, Ohio on the east, Kentucky to the south and Illinois to the west, they raised a barrier. Bob, however, did not sense it.

"Not that I slept the night I spent in the White House," he said. "I slid down the bannisters until a detective stopped me. They were the slipperiest bannisters I've ever slid down."

So a week passed. Then, just as a tray with iced tea, tall glasses and water cress sandwiches was being placed on the veranda one tea-time, Bernice came. She was wearing a navy suit with white plique accents, and her pillbox hat was crisp pique, too. Over the brief suit jacket she had thrown a cape of silver fox.

Sarah Anne, coming to the veranda with a dish of lemon rings spiced with cloves, saw her, and heard the silvery voice say:

"Darling, you're nearly well! How heavenly! And Bob, dear, please, I'd like a preacher to say some magic words. Now!"

Sarah Anne did not open the screen door. She went down the walk, stopping only to pick up her purse. She had seen something lovely begin and end. And it was foolish to be upset because she and Bob were merely officially engaged. They didn't even pretend. She thought Bob called her name, but she did not look back.

If Bob and Bernice were married now, they would go away. Let Mrs. Allen, Miss Sarah and Miss Anne talk about man's inconstancy and hand her their pale pity! Let her father watch her curiously for the second time that summer. She could explain to him.

However, it was nonsense for poets to say that hearts broke only once. Hearts had a wonderful resiliency. They healed themselves and cracked again.

Only she knew that the first agony had come from the passing of something that was little better than a dream. She had pinned her shining wings to Jack's shoulders and expected them to fit. But Bob, who never had said he loved her and whom she couldn't really love, was making a shambles out of her emotions.

She came to the gate and paused, for a car was slowing down. A long wine and chromium roadster stopped as though it knew that parking place well. It was Lynn who called to her.

"A new car!" she exclaimed, glad to escape into the material. "You must be getting a dollar a word. The old one was nice enough."

"Sort of out of order after it rambled off the other night." He climbed out. "Going far? Can I take you?"

"I'm just aimlessly wandering. Corrine isn't around. I'm sorry."

She was glad, though. She wanted to know why this handsome stranger was working such a spell on her sister. Maybe he himself didn't realize it, she reasoned honestly.

"I know. She's away for the day at a sorority picnic, isn't she?"

"You know her social calendar better than I do."

"She told me. How about getting a coat and hat and eating dinner with me somewhere? I'm at Corrine's and just trusted to luck. Corrine would be back. You've been so engrossed with that flyer, you've waved goodbye lately."

Merely because she wanted to escape that scene on the veranda, Sarah Anne answered: "Suppose you get my coat and hat in the hall. I'm as free tonight as the air at a falling star."

When Lynn brought her the wraps she laughed lightly. "Lynn dear, this is Corrine's white polo coat and this is the child's most intriguing picture hat! But I'll accept the loan." She snapped the black velvet chin band at the side of her cheek and slipped into the coat.

"This is luck," Lynn answered. "I like you, Sarah Anne. Like it's a good, solid word."

"I know, like flannels and spinach and American history. Look, the rain is beginning again. But that's all right. I prefer wet drippings."

Now if the thunder would crash, the lightning would flash, and the clouds would burst, she might have a very enjoyable evening. She would be gay! She might even be flirtatious. Why not? Nothing meant anything to a man, anyway. She would make a blacklist and on it she would place all men who had rough, bright hair, teasing voices, impudent grins. She would give four stars to any of them who drove airplanes instead of chromolium and maroon roadsters—four stars for inelegibility.

They were finishing dinner, in a hotel dining room, when Lynn spoke in a guarded voice. "Sarah Anne, there are four men at a corner table who are watching me. Friends of Punk's, no doubt. I'd like to give them the slip. You sit tight, while I pretend to leave. I'll circle around and be back after they get the idea I've walked out on you."

Sarah Anne, in that moment, was not conscious that she was picking up the thread of the events of the night when Lynn's car had disappeared, Punk Edwards had broken into the parsonage, and she and Bob had been dragged. She merely knew that Lynn's life held excitement around its fringes.

Sitting in the hotel dining room, listening to an orchestra that sent a lilting, happy song across the candle-light tables, Sarah Anne felt curiously at peace. It was a good feeling—a sense of having been deserted by everyone and not particularly caring. She must foster it and be independent.

She glanced into her small beaded purse. She had some change and a postage stamp. Oh, yes, her

Imp from Lincoln cathedral. A classmate, traveling in England one summer, had brought the minute silver token from an old silversmith whose shop stood near the bridge beyond the great church.

"Guard it, Sarah Anne," she had said. "It stands for luck—or at least protection."

She fingered the good luck piece. Luck? She had been comfortably happy in her hypothesis of a world until lately. No miracles or orchids or headline happenings, though.

The flute and the clarinet were weaving a tapestry of sound now, and the low voices in the dining room grew quiet. Her thoughts patterned themselves to the music. She had watched doors opening, heard them swing shut. She was not fickle, she reminded herself. After all, she had reserved the best seat in her mental gallery for Jack all these years. But she wished she knew why Bob had sat down in it as soon as Jack stood up.

The little imp, so slippery and small, slipped through her fingers. She reached for it, but it went on ahead. There was a crack in the floor and it disappeared. She gazed at the spot curiously. Her good luck token was getting away. Well, a waiter would salvage it, she motioned. But before the attendant reached the table Lynn was back. He hurriedly placed some silver on the table and reached for her arm.

"We're sort of hurrying, my sweet. That man whom you don't like and I don't like is around."

The car ate up the miles, and the motor hummed against the wind and the rain. But Sarah Anne was thinking that maybe by now Bob was married to Bernice. Maybe everyone knew what a fool she had been. If only she need never face anyone. If she could roll down the night, never finding morning and reality. Her independent feeling had deserted her.

Lynn was swinging the car through an old gate and it wobbled on a rough, uneven country road. Trees leaned over the path, and that path went deeper and deeper into the forest.

"Where are we going?" she asked.

"To a place I know. You don't mind, do you?"

"I'm afraid I do. It's dark and frightening."

"Sorry. Hold on now. The next lap is bumpy."

It was. The car shot from side to side of the road. Finally Lynn plunged aside, stopped, switched off the lights. "We're here."

"At a club I know. Private one. It's dark. And what do we do?"

"Get acquainted." His arm reached for her and she slipped away. He moved back at once. "Sorry, I always have liked you better than I should have."

"Hadn't we better go back?" He looked at her, though the darkness hid his gaze.

"We can't go back, Sarah Anne. I won't stall any longer. That gate is watched, and we're lucky to be here. Very, very lucky!"

ADOLF

This is about Adolf. Not Adolf of Berlin, but Adolf Berle, Assistant Secretary of State. Mr. Berle has given us a preview of the Third Term. A commendable frankness places this country in his debt. He advocates the totalitarian state in finance and economics. He admits it without proof.

At this point one's mind goes back five years to Dr. William Wirt. He quoted the braintrusters as saying then, "We have Roosevelt in the middle of a swift stream—the Kentucky of the coming revolution".

At that time everybody denied everything. But now the revolution is not denied. It is planned that way. Berle proves Dr. Wirt quoted correctly.

Speaking before Senator O'Mahoney's National Economic Committee, Mr. Berle bluntly stated: "The government will have to enter into direct financing of activities now supposed to be private, and a continuance of that direct financing must be inevitable."

Compare this statement with what was said to Dr. Wirt five years ago: "When Uncle Sam becomes our financier he must also follow his money with control and management." Mr. Berle's program means the gradual liquidation of the middle class Americans, who now "own most of the productive plants of the United States"—a million investors in railroads, five million in the other utilities, ten million in industry, mines, trucks, buses, etc. Agriculture is also a "productive plant". At least Stalin and Hitler think so. Whether Berle would confiscate the property of the 25 million people now living on our farms and put them on a "collective" a la Stalin, a la Hitler, he does not say. But he moves in that direction.

Mr. Berle says plainly of private banks that "there seems to be no reason for their existence". So goodbye banks. The insurance companies as sources of credit, i.e., finding a safe and profitable investment for your money, will have great difficulty competing with Berle banks that "create" credit as easily as counterfeiters print green goods. What happens to their policy holders he does not say. But we know what did happen to them in Europe.

Whether he would include newspapers, magazines, advertising, radio, etc., as part of the "productive plant" he does not say. But as he intends to control the flow and use of credit in order to stimulate (?) new goods, new styles, new fashions, etc., it seems certain that advertising cannot remain in private hands. And so the newspapers, magazines and radio face liquidation for want of financial support. This program means the end of our free enterprise system and the Constitution of the United States. For few of his plans can nature under the Constitution interpreted by legislators or judges who have regard for their oath of office. But Mr. Berle says he is "not a socialist". And, surely, Berle "is an honorable man."

Mr. Berle thinks state banking and credit control would not work well in a "democracy" unless it is "removed from partisan political administration" so that "no class will be unduly favored!" Mr. Berle is a brave man. He is just the boy to put in charge of W.P.A. I should like to see him meet his old boss, Mr. LaGuardia, when the latter comes to Washington at the head of the mayor's lobby!

Mr. Berle's present chief was one time not so naive. F. D. Roosevelt once held the view that "Were it possible to find master minds so unselfish, so willing to decide unhesitatingly against their own personal interests or private prejudices, men almost God-like in their ability to hold the scales of justice with an even hand, such a government might be to the interest of the country, but there are none such on our political horizon, and we can not expect a complete reversal of all the teachings of history."

F. D. R. was right in 1930. A government that controls credit controls men. It is a dictatorship even though you call it a "democracy". Call skunk cabbages roses, and roses, skunk cabbages, and they smell the same.

When will the millions of middle class Americans wake up to what will happen when Mr. Berle takes from them "most of the productive plants of the United States"? When will business managers recognize their trusteeship for these thirty people, and stand up and fight?

The best comment on Brain Truster Berle comes from ex-Brain Truster Raymond Moley, who was a Democrat in 1932, and remains one today. Mr. Moley says the American people will "vote out of power, root and branch, those office holders who have lost faith in the present economic system. They will give that system another chance under people who believe in it". Amen, and Amen!

$1,000,000,000 annual revenue, and excise and nuisance taxes which bring in approximately $544,000,000 a year. The three-cent postal rate, yielding about $100,000,000 annually, also was continued.

Business aids extended by the bill besides abolition of undistributed profits taxes included:

Provisions for a two-year carryover of net operating business losses for corporations.

Redeclaration upward of capital stock value in order to decrease the excess profits tax on corporations.

Repeal of the $2,000 limitation applicable to capital losses of corporations, a provision permitting corporations to take tax deductions on account of capital losses.

Provisions for financially distressed corporations to purchase securities at less than par without tax liability.

Mr. Roosevelt also signed the following measures: an act continuing until June 30, 1942, the six-states oil compact, the labor department appropriation bill and the appropriation bill for the department of state, commerce, justice and the judiciary.

weeks ago, Japanese troops established a blockade around the Anglo-French concession at Tientsin.

Thirty-six British marines were landed at Foochow in direct defiance of Japan's request, in order to protect lives and property at the British consulate.

Japanese naval landing forces two days ago occupied islands off Foochow in preparation for the direct onslaught on the city, one of China's last inlets for war materials.

(The London Daily Express today reported from Hong Kong that the Japanese navy blockaded two British destroyers, the Darling and Duchess, in Foochow harbor. Booms and mine fields were placed across the harbor entrance, it was stated. When British naval authorities protested, the Japanese replied, according to the Express: "We cannot assume responsibility for any situation in which British vessels blocked in the harbor may be involved.")

Fresh difficulties at Foochow, it was assumed, will have a direct bearing on the Anglo-Japanese negotiations regarding the Tientsin blockade due to begin at Tokyo Monday.

Both sides are wide apart before the conference begins. Now the Japanese are said to be demanding withdrawal of all British influence from North China. Newspapers in Tokyo are advocating strengthening of the blockade at Tientsin and a stiffer attitude by the negotiators in Tokyo to avoid a compromise.

the focal point of the new world crisis.

Exchange Telegram reported from Warsaw that a majority of officials in Danzig had been compelled to take an oath of allegiance to the Nazi-controlled Danzig senate. Apparently this oath involved Polish customs officials, since a protest, according to Exchange, was filed by the Polish commissioner general. Poland, under the dwindling Treaty of Versailles, is entitled to control Danzig's customs.

The Daily Telegraph heard from Warsaw that Danzigers between the ages of 16 and 25 had been ordered to enlist in the Nazi free corps, and it was expected that the enrollment would be completed by July 6.

WARSAW, June 30—Increasing reports that German army garrisons are being reinforced in East Prussia aroused Polish interest today, but calm confidence was maintained that Polish mobilization in the last few months adequately compensate for the greater German strength in the neighboring territory.

GREAT BRITAIN ALTERS STAND TO BACK POLES

sharp variance with the British fears. On the assumption that the latter are grounded on fact, there is room again for speculation as to the real attitude of Poland. Moscicki told Hitler that he and his nation would fight for the Corridor and a Baltic outlet, but neither his words nor the continuing threat of a Nazi coup in Danzig succeeded in rousing the country to the war fever that might have been expected.

So the world is presented with the strange spectacle of Great Britain, traditional arbiter in the heated quarrels of Europe, taking the offensive in behalf of a smaller and weaker nation even before a real threat to its independence and security has been voiced.

The British attitude must be based on the belief that only by means of such an offensive can Hitler be deterred from carrying out his announced plan of reuniting Danzig with the Reich. There was a time when Britain and even Poland might have counted on this new chapter in Nazi expansionism but the new policy set forth by Viscount Halifax has apparently outlawed it forever.

Fireworks Up To Britain
Yet the Anglo-Polish treaty provides that the resistance must first come from Warsaw, that Britain herself is not to fight Germany unless the Poles start firing first. Poland may be loading her guns in preparation for the emergency, but she is doing it so quietly and leaving the pyrotechnics up to Britain.

VIRGINIAN HITS THIRD TERM IDEA

Friends Of F. D. Against Election Of Any Man
For That Long

WASHINGTON, June 30—The third term drive suffered a check today when Chairman Pat Drewry (D) Virginia, of the Democratic congressional campaign committee, announced his opposition to a third term "for any president."

Drewry, who has guided the Democrats to smashing congressional election victories, based his opposition on principle.

"I think it is a matter of principle that there should not be a third term for a president," said Drewry. "I think this is true whether the president be a democrat or a Republican."

"I am not opposed to Roosevelt the man—I am opposed to breaking the tradition of this country against a third term."

Drewry declared that the Democratic party has a wealth of candidates for the presidency in 1940. The party, he declared, can win with a new candidate for the presidency.

"I have no opinion as to whether Mr. Roosevelt seeks a third term," said Drewry. "I trust the President's statement that he has not made any decision on the matter."

Drewry, whose business it is to keep his finger on the political pulse of the nation, declined to name possible Democratic candidates in 1940. He is confident, however, that the party can unite on a candidate to heal its differences and elect its man.

Unlike some Virginia members of congress, who have anti-New Deal records, Drewry has been a close friend of Mr. Roosevelt. While he has opposed many of his measures, he has gone down the line on crucial issues and in campaigns.

FILIBUSTER MAY BE ATTEMPTED BY G. O. P. FOES

Taft And Vandenberg Hold
Fate Of Policies In Their Decisions

ers said they were ready to join Republicans to delay tactics that would kill the monetary bill, but refused to take the lead.

Senators Taft (R), Ohio, Townsend (R) Delaware, Vandenberg (R) Michigan, were the key figures in the Republican nucleus bent on ending the fiscal powers of the President. All three were bitterly opposed to extension of the devaluation powers, but were doubtful whether they should filibuster the conference report to death and thus end also the treasury stabilization fund's life.

Taft To Go Ahead

Taft appeared ready to go ahead with the program of defeat for the report; Vandenberg avoided a direct announcement of his sentiments. Both have been boomed for the Republican presidential nomination.

Silver state support of the conference report continuing the fiscal powers was assured, in large measure, because of the provision for 70 cents an ounce silver. Taft and several of the conservative Democrats who voted to end the President's powers said there was a "slim chance" of defeating the conference report on a senate roll call, but conceded the issue was doubtful. The only sure way they had to end the President's power was filibuster — easily effective since the conference report will not come to the senate until 1 p. m. or later, leaving only 11 hours of delay tactics necessary to win their objective.

Whatever happens, the issue was a close one, and at best was calculated to draw President Roosevelt to the capitol at midnight tonight to sign the monetary bill conference report if it is adopted.

WAR SECRETARY TO BE CHANGED

Paul V. McNutt, Indiana's 1940 presidential aspirant.

McNutt, now back in the United States to lay the groundwork for his bid for the Democratic nomination next year, is expected to submit his resignation to the President at an early date.

Should Woodring decline the proffered Philippine post, the chief executive is expected to offer it to Assistant Secretary of State Francis Sayre.

Sayre, a son-in-law of the late Woodrow Wilson, has steered the course of the government's new proposal to keep economic strings tied to the strategic and rich Philippine islands until 1960, even though independence is scheduled to be granted the commonwealth in 1945.

Regardless of whether Woodring takes the job of high commissioner, informed quarters said the President is determined to give the post of Secretary of War to Johnson.

Woodring, whose business it is to keep his finger on the political pulse of the nation, declined to name possible Democratic candidates in 1940. He is confident, however, that the party can unite on a candidate to heal its differences and elect its man.

Young McDonald had been missing since the body of his mother was found Tuesday in her Hollywood rooming house. She had been beaten to death with a claw hammer, presumably 24 hours before the murder was discovered.

A long candle had been placed on her partially nude body in a weird effort at symbolism. A religious tract and a key were also found near the body.

Police said they learned young McDonald was a moody sort of youth, given to much solitude and brooding. He seldom talked to any one living at the rooming house, read constantly and did not often go out.

Mrs. Campbell began her acting career in New York and in 1920 came to Hollywood. She appeared in films for several years.

After securing a divorce from her first husband, the father of their son, she married Joseph Swickard, an actor, in 1924, from whom she was divorced in 1929.

In the last few years she had been teaching dramatics and often lectured at the Los Angeles City College night school.

Drewry, who has guided the Democrats to smashing congressional election victories, based his opposition on principle.

"I think it is a matter of principle that there should not be a third term for a president," said Drewry. "I think this is true whether the president be a democrat or a Republican."

"I am not opposed to Roosevelt the man—I am opposed to breaking the tradition of this country against a third term."

Drewry declared that the Democratic party has a wealth of candidates for the presidency in 1940. The party, he declared, can win with a new candidate for the presidency.

"I have no opinion as to whether Mr. Roosevelt seeks a third term," said Drewry. "I trust the President's statement that he has not made any decision on the matter."

Drewry, whose business it is to keep his finger on the political pulse of the nation, declined to name possible Democratic candidates in 1940. He is confident, however, that the party can unite on a candidate, heal its differences and elect its man.

Unlike some Virginia members of congress, who have anti-New Deal records, Drewry has been a close friend of Mr. Roosevelt. While he has opposed many of his measures, he has gone down the line on crucial issues and in campaigns.

ers said they were ready to join Republicans to delay tactics that would kill the monetary bill, but refused to take the lead.

Senators Taft (R) Ohio, Townsend (R) Delaware, Vandenberg (R) Michigan, were the key figures in the Republican nucleus bent on ending the fiscal powers of the President. All three were bitterly opposed to extension of the devaluation powers, but were doubtful whether they should filibuster the conference report to death and thus end also the treasury stabilization fund's life.

Taft to Go Ahead
Taft appeared ready to go ahead with the program of defeat for the report; Vandenberg avoided a direct announcement of his sentiments. Both have been boomed for the Republican presidential nomination.

Silver state support of the conference report continuing the fiscal powers was assured, in large measure, because of the provision for 70 cents an ounce silver. Taft and several of the conservative Democrats who voted to end the President's powers said there was a "slim chance" of defeating the conference report on a senate roll call, but conceded the issue was doubtful. The only sure way they had to end the President's power was filibuster — easily effective since the conference report will not come to the senate until 1 p. m. or later, leaving only 11 hours of delay tactics necessary to win their objective.

Whatever happens, the issue was a close one, and at best was calculated to draw President Roosevelt to the capitol at midnight tonight to sign the monetary bill conference report if it is adopted.

Paul V. McNutt, Indiana's 1940 presidential aspirant.

McNutt, now back in the United States to lay the groundwork for his bid for the Democratic nomination next year, is expected to submit his resignation to the President at an early date.

Should Woodring decline the proffered Philippine post, the chief executive is expected to offer it to Assistant Secretary of State Francis Sayre.

Sayre, a son-in-law of the late Woodrow Wilson, has steered the course of the government's new proposal to keep economic strings tied to the strategic and rich Philippine islands until 1960, even though independence is scheduled to be granted the commonwealth in 1945.

Regardless of whether Woodring takes the job of high commissioner, informed quarters said the President is determined to give the post of Secretary of War to Johnson.

BOB 'BICYCLE' PASTOR NEXT FOR JOE LOUIS; DETROIT SITE FAVORED

BOMBER WANTS PUG WHO STAYED FULL DISTANCE

Numerous Managers Put Up Arguments For Their Fighters

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, June 30—With some assurance, but not absolute certainty, it can be reported today that Joe Louis' next knockout victim will be Bob Pastor in a heavyweight championship fight at Detroit in September. This encounter is in the making now and will be consummated next week, barring unforeseen hitches. There won't be any logical reason for further deferring a return match between the two because Louis has ranked under the stigma of letting Pastor stay the limit when they met before and the latter avowedly is eager to prove he can do it again—for the challenger's end of the purse.

Main obstacle, but not one to be regarded seriously, is the haggling of sundry and numerous managers who are clamoring their rights to a crack at the champion and the gate receipts through their respective proxies, the heavyweights they represent. This little matter can and undoubtedly will be taken care of by Promoter Mike Jacobs through the expedient of simply signing Pastor, if he is of a mind to do it. He doesn't pay much attention to managers who attempt to show him just why their heavyweights should be given work.

Joe Gould sought a fight for Tommy Farr and Louis in London. Ray Carlen wanted a crack at the champion for Lou Nova. Joe Jacobs wanted a return engagement for Galento. Jimmy Johnston hollered in behalf of Pastor. Lapsing frequently into their native tongue, which is double talk, they reviled each other and beached Promoter Jacobs and got in their plugs with the press all the while approaching a free-for-all, until finally the thing broke up with nothing settled, but with Pastor seemingly closer to the hatch than any of the rest. Elsewhere, specifically in his range, N. J., tavern, Galento hounded his operations to his friends and patrons, who gathered here to lift many a tankard in celebration of his moral victory over Louis. Tarzan went four rounds, slapped the champion down once and finished game as lion. That was good enough for the Jerseyites to mull over—especially when Galento infrequently cut one up on the house.

Philly Has Something in Arnovich, Outfielder Leading Majors in Batting

By WALTER L. JOHNS
NEW YORK, June 30—The Phils have got something in Morris Arnovich. And Philly fans hope they'll be able to keep him. Arnovich, the National League's Jewish pride, is currently slugging his way to the senior loop's batting crown, riding along far in front of the crowd of base busters. All season the Philly outfielder has been flirting with the 400 mark and he isn't much below that now.

Which all adds up to one thing—good price on the market. But Manager Doc Prothro, who is reported as saying he "wouldn't trade Arnovich for Joe Medwich," points out that the Jewish slugger won't be sold. He has become a favorite with Philly fans, their first since Chuck Klein was banging 'em all over the place. Began on Sandlots
The Phils had a pretty fair sort of pitcher this year in Claude Passeau. He won 25 games for the club the last two years. Passeau went to the Cubs, as you know, for Marty Harrell and Higbee. Quaker City fans don't want the same thing to happen to Arnovich.

Arnovich is hitting above his head. But he always has been a good .300 hitter, ever since he began playing baseball in the American Legion sandlot tournaments up around his home town of Superior, Wis. At that time, the Flailing Phil played shortstop and third base. He joined the Superior club in the Northern league in 1933 and slammed out a .331 average in 103 games. The next year he hoisted it to .374 in 121 games, playing the outfield part of the season.

Righthanded Batter
The Phils discovered him then, and optioned him to Hazelton of the New York-Pennsylvania league. The two seasons he was with Hazelton he batted .305 and .327. At the tag end of 1936 he hit .313 in 13 games for the Phils. In 1937 Arnovich fell below .300 for the first time in his career, getting .290 in 117 games. Last year he wound up with .275. The Jewish outfielder is a righthanded batter and thrower. He stands five feet nine inches and weighs 170 pounds. He was born in Superior in 1914. Unmarried, he has an uncle and two cousins, rabbis.

TALES in TIDBITS

BY WILLIAM RITT
The Yankees don't like night baseball. ... And it isn't because they were licked by the Athletics, of all people, in the first post-summer game they played. ... Outfielders say it's too easy to lose the ball in the great banks of bright lights and dangerous on that account, too. ... But night ball certainly brings the crowds — and a big gate.
Joe Cronin, Red Sox manager, has a right to be the most discouraged man in baseball. ... The Bostonians have a much better won-and-lost record than they had last year. ... But they are further behind the Yankees now than they were then. ... It seems whenever an American league team steps on the gas the New Yorks step on the accelerator just a little bit harder.
As the Cincinnati Reds enter the middle of the hot National league race they are well protected with left-handed pitchers. ... They have added Art Jacobs of Buffalo to their staff. ... And they already have such sterling southpaws as Lee Grissom and Johnny Vander Meer.
The Phillies certainly are Pitcher Paul Derringer's "cousins." ... the Reds' hurler hasn't lost a game to the Quaker club since sometime early in 1937.
Two Ladies' Days a Week
The St. Louis Cardinals, originators of the farm system idea, have come through with another new stunt. ... The Red Birds have a free gate for women twice a week.
One of the smoothest tempered men in baseball has had a ruin, at last, with an umpire. ... He's Manager Tom Sheehan of the Minneapolis Millers. ... The other day an umpire tossed him out of the game the first time this has happened in his 25-year career.
Somebody must have told Wesley Ferrell, recently dropped from the Yankee mound staff, that he is handsome. ... Wes now wants to go to Hollywood. ... If the movies can't use Wes we imagine the Hollywood Stars could.
Trevor Wignall, English boxing writer, is making his 50th trip to the United States to look over the sports scene here. ... Boy, do some guys have it soft!
St. Louis Nixed by Tax
As though the Browns and Cardinals haven't trouble enough luring customers through the gate, a 3 percent tax on baseball tickets has been installed. ... Either one of the clubs must quit or both turn to night baseball.
What's become of Larry Benton, the old-time Giants' pitcher? ... That's easy—Larry is managing a bus line in Cincinnati. ... Friends say Larry weighs and looks much the same as when he dropped out of baseball.

GLANDULAR AILMENT TO KEEP RACER IN SHED

NEW YORK, June 30—A glandular condition will probably keep Johnstown, the "horse of the year," out of the Arlington classic and other important stake engagements for the near future, it was learned today.
The Jamestown colt's ailment is not serious if attended to in the early stages. If not looked after, it will eventually develop into a "wind-broken" condition which is a terrific handicap to a racer, especially on windy days when he finds it hard to breathe.
The first indications of the trouble came about when Johnstown added the Dwyer to his list of triumphs. Frank Keogh, a patrol judge, heard the colt's labored breathing and, when he returned to the weighing-out ring, his breath sounded like a miniature volcano.
Johnstown has been confined to his stable since that time and his capable trainer, "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, though not alarmed over the situation, will not work out the colt until he is positive he had rid himself of his ailment.

JIMMY SNYDER, RACER, KILLED

Man Who Drove Second At Indianapolis Dies At St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Ill., June 30—American auto racing marked up its second major tragedy within a month today when the death of 30-year-old Jimmy Snyder of Chicago, former milk man whose love for speed carried him to the heights as a racer.
Snyder, married and the father of three children, was killed last night at the Cahokia track, a quarter-mile dirt oval five miles south of East St. Louis, almost a month to the day after his friendly rival, Floyd Roberts of Van Nuys, Cal., died in a crash during the 500-mile race at Indianapolis last Memorial Day.
Trailing Ronnie Householder of Los Angeles in the fifth lap of the 30-lap feature of Cahokia, Snyder had lapped all but one car in a burst of speed when the accident occurred.
Coming out of the south turn, the Chicagoan edged too close to the fence, and as boards flew in one direction his heavy little machine bounced crazily in another and came to rest on top of its driver in mid-track.
Three cars roared past the inert Snyder and then a car driven by Paul Armbruster of St. Louis, weaving and out of control, smashed into the still form.
Snyder was rushed to St. Mary's hospital, where he was pronounced dead of a broken neck.
Five thousand persons witnessed the tragedy and saw Les Adair, Indianapolis driver, narrowly escape a similar fate. Adair's car burst suddenly into flames on one of the turns, and he was badly burned. At the hospital, Adair was said to be in a critical condition.
Snyder was among the nation's best known drivers and finished second in the Indianapolis classic last month.

Decided to Punish Tony, Champion Joe Claims

By Hype Igoe
NEW YORK, June 30—Joe Louis changed his mind about trying for a one-round knockout over Tony Galento ten minutes before he entered the ring at the Yankee Stadium. The bomber, keen for running up a string of first round knockout blasts, suddenly decided, it was revealed today, to "fool around with that man and give him a little going over," all because of the names Tony had been hurling.

"I didn't mean to end it as soon as I did, but after getting clouted in the first round and then floored in the third round, I decided to wipe him out," Joe said. "The punch which shook me in the first round was a right-hander high on the temple. The punch which knocked me down in the third, a left hook, wasn't hard. That crack in the first was a sweetie," said the champion.
Every writer around the ring tabbed the punch which shook Louis so badly as a left hook to the top of Joe's right cheek bone, and a bruise, right beneath the eye, is in evidence today to prove that the punch landed there. I jotted down a note at the time that the punch had raised a welt under the eye.
"I just got a notion to let him stick around a little," Joe repeated.
"Was it because you wanted to give the crowd a run for its money?"
"Might Be Going Yet
"No, it wasn't that. I just changed my mind, that's all. I knew I'd knock him out, but I changed my mind about making it fast. The fight might be going yet if he hadn't knocked me down."
There is an old story that Tex Rickard coaxed Jack Dempsey to spare Georges Carpentier a few rounds when they met at Boyle's Thirty Acres and Jack was almost knocked out trying to do Tex a favor. If Joe Louis was doing anybody a favor in the Yankee stadium at the last minute it probably is the last one he'll ever hand out while he is champion. Boy, he had a close shave!

RED BIRDS MEET COLONELS AFTER DEFEAT 3 TO 2

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 30—The Columbus Red Birds were to arrive in Louisville today for a series opener with the Colonels after dropping the second of a two-game stand to the Indians at Indianapolis.

The Ohio team was nosed out by the Indians 3 to 2. The game followed a twilight exhibition contest which Indianapolis lost to the Cincinnati Reds of the National League 3 to 2.

Nubs Kleinke, Red Bird pitcher, held Indianapolis down until the eighth inning, when a triple with one man on base cinched the game.

Meanwhile, the Minneapolis Millers moved to within one-half game of first position in the American association by defeating the Brewers at Milwaukee 6 to 4.

The circuit-leading Kansas City Blues split a double header with the Saints at St. Paul. St. Paul took the opener 11 to 6 and the visitors came back with a 6 to 1 victory in the second game.

Toledo ended its series with Louisville by taking the final game 7 to 4.

Games scheduled today in addition to the Columbus-Louisville contest were: Milwaukee at St. Paul, Kansas City at Minneapolis and Toledo at Indianapolis.

BOB 'BICYCLE' PASTOR NEXT FOR JOE LOUIS; DETROIT SITE FAVORED

BOMBER WANTS PUG WHO STAYED FULL DISTANCE

Numerous Managers Put Up Arguments For Their Fighters

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, June 30—With some assurance, but not absolute certainty, it can be reported today that Joe Louis' next knockout victim will be Bob Pastor in a heavyweight championship fight at Detroit in September. This encounter is in the making now and will be consummated next week, barring unforeseen hitches. There won't be any logical reason for further deferring a return match between the two because Louis has ranked under the stigma of letting Pastor stay the limit when they met before and the latter avowedly is eager to prove he can do it again—for the challenger's end of the purse.

Main obstacle, but not one to be regarded seriously, is the haggling of sundry and numerous managers who are clamoring their rights to a crack at the champion and the gate receipts through their respective proxies, the heavyweights they represent. This little matter can and undoubtedly will be taken care of by Promoter Mike Jacobs through the expedient of simply signing Pastor, if he is of a mind to do it. He doesn't pay much attention to managers who attempt to show him just why their heavyweights should be given work.

Just Business Matter

It is strictly a business matter with him and it is reliably reported, as they say, that he personally favors Louis and Pastor at Detroit, virgin territory for the champion who somehow has never got around to making any of his seven defenses in his home town.

Louis' four-round knockout over Galento inspired what might be termed a riotous scene last yesterday at the boxing headquarters conducted and maintained by Promoter Jacobs. There the managers gathered with the press and midst scenes of wildest disorder had at each other.

This will give you an idea: Joe Gould sought a fight for Tommy Farr and Louis in London. Ray Carlen wanted a crack at the champion for Lou Nova. Joe Jacobs wanted a return engagement for Galento.

Jimmy Johnston hollered in behalf of Pastor.

Lapsing frequently into their native tongue, which is double talk, they reviled each other and beached Promoter Jacobs and got their plugs with the press all the while approaching a free-for-all, until finally the thing broke up with nothing settled, but with Pastor seemingly closer to the match than any of the rest.

Elsewhere, specifically in his range, N. J. tavern, Galento showed his operations to his friends and patrons, who gathered here to lift many a tankard in celebration of his moral victory over Louis. Tarzan went four rounds, slapped the champion down once and finished game as lion. That was good enough for the Jerseyites to mull over—especially when Galento infrequently got one up on the house.

Philly Has Something in Arnovich, Outfielder Leading Majors in Batting

By WALTER L. JOHNS
NEW YORK, June 30—The Phils have got something in Morris Arnovich. And Philly fans hope they'll be able to keep him.

Arnovich, the National League's Jewish pride, is currently slugging his way to the senior loop's batting crown, riding along far in front of the crowd of base busters. All season the Philly outfielder has been flirting with the 400 mark and he isn't much below that now.

Which all adds up to one thing—good price on the market. But Manager Doc Prothro, who is reported as saying he "wouldn't trade Arnovich for Joe Medwick," points out that the Jewish slugger won't be sold. He has become a favorite with Philly fans, their first since Chuck Klein was banging 'em all over the place.

Began on Sandlots
The Phils had a pretty fair sort of pitcher this year in Claude Passeau. He won 25 games for the club the last two years. Passeau went to the Cubs, as you know, for Marty Harrell and Higbee. Quaker City fans don't want the same thing to happen to Arnovich.

Arnovich is hitting above his head. But he always has been a good .300 hitter, ever since he began playing baseball in the American Legion sandlot tournaments up around his home town of Superior, Wis.

At that time, the flailing Phil played shortstop and third base. He joined the Superior club in the Northern league in 1933 and slugged out a .331 average in 103 games. The next year he hoisted it to .374 in 121 games, playing the outfield part of the season.

Righthanded Batter

The Phils discovered him then, and optioned him to Hazelton of the New York-Pennsylvania league. The two seasons he was with Hazelton he batted .305 and .327. At the tag end of 1935 he hit .313 in 13 games for the Phils.

In 1937 Arnovich fell below .300 for the first time in his career, getting .290 in 117 games. Last year he wound up with .275.

The Jewish outfielder is a righthanded batter and thrower. He stands five feet nine inches and weighs 170 pounds. He was born in Superior in 1914. Unmarried, he has an uncle and two cousins, rabbis.

TALES in TIDBITS

BY WILLIAM RITT

The Yankees don't like night baseball. . . . And it isn't because they were licked by the Athletics, of all people, in the first post-supper game they played. . . . Outfielders say it's too easy to lose the ball in the great banks of bright lights and dangerous on that account, too. . . . But night ball certainly brings the crowds — and a big gate.

Joe Cronin, Red Sox manager, has a right to be the most discouraged man in baseball. . . . The Bostonians have a much better won-and-lost record than they had last year. . . . But they are further behind the Yankees now than they were then. . . . It seems whenever an American league team steps on the gas the New Yorks step on the accelerator just a little bit harder.

As the Cincinnati Reds enter the middle of the hot National League race they are well protected with left-handed pitchers. . . . They have added Art Jacobs of Buffalo to their staff. . . . And they already have such sterling southpaws as Lee Grissom and Johnny Vander Meer.

The Phillies certainly are Pitcher Paul Derringer's "cousins." . . . the Reds' hurler hasn't lost a game to the Quaker club since sometime early in 1937.

Two Ladies' Days a Week
The St. Louis Cardinals, originators of the farm system idea, have come through with another new stunt. . . . The Red Birds have a free gate for women twice a week.

One of the smoothest tempered men in baseball has had a run-in, at last, with an umpire. . . . He's Manager Tom Sheehan of the Minneapolis Millers. . . . The other day an umpire tossed him out of the game the first time this has happened in his 25-year career.

Somebody must have told Wesley Ferrell, recently dropped from the Yankee mound staff, that he is handsome. . . . Wes now wants to go to Hollywood.

Wesley Ferrell, recently dropped from the Yankee mound staff, that he is handsome. . . . Wes now wants to go to Hollywood.

As the movies can't use Wes we imagine the Hollywood Stars could.

Trevor Wignall, English boxing writer, is making his 50th trip to the United States to look over the sports scene here. . . . Boy, do some guys have it soft!

St. Louie Nicked by Tax
As though the Browns and Cardinals haven't trouble enough luring customers through the gate, a 3 percent tax on baseball tickets has been installed. . . . Either one of the clubs must quit or both turn to night baseball.

What's become of Larry Benton, the old-time Giants' pitcher? . . . That's easy—Larry is managing a bus line in Cincinnati.

Friends say Larry weighs and looks much the same as when he dropped out of baseball.

REDLEGS MEET CUBS IN CHICAGO BAILIWICK
CHICAGO, June 30—League-leading Cincinnati Reds and the fourth-place Cubs of the National circuit were to meet in Chicago today.

The Cubs moved to within one game of the third-place St. Louis squad when they defeated the Cardinals 7 to 6.

The Reds kept their four and one-half game lead while marking time in the pennant race by defeating the American Association Indians 3 to 2 in an exhibition game at Indianapolis.

Johnstown has been confined to his stable since that time and his capable trainer, "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, though not alarmed over the situation, will not work out the colt until he is positive he had rid himself of his ailment.

JIMMY SNYDER, RACER, KILLED

Man Who Drove Second At Indianapolis Dies At St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Ill., June 30—American auto racing marked up its second major tragedy within a month today when the death of 30-year-old Jimmy Snyder of Chicago, former milk man whose love for speed carried him to the heights as a racer.

Snyder, married and the father of three children, was killed last night at the Cahokia track, a quarter-mile dirt oval five miles south of East St. Louis, almost a month to the day after his friendly rival, Floyd Roberts of Van Nuys, Cal., died in a crash during the 500-mile race at Indianapolis last Memorial Day.

Trailing Ronnie Householder of Los Angeles in the fifth lap of the 30-lap feature of Cahokia, Snyder had lapped all but one car in a burst of speed when the accident occurred.

Coming out of the south turn, the Chicagoan edged too close to the fence, and as boards flew in one direction his heavy little machine bounced crazily in another and came to rest on top of its driver in mid-track.

Three cars roared past the inert Snyder and then a car driven by Paul Armbruster of St. Louis, weaving and out of control, smashed into the still form.

Snyder was rushed to St. Mary's hospital, where he was pronounced dead of a broken neck.

Five thousand persons witnessed the tragedy and saw Les Adair, Indianapolis driver, narrowly escape a similar fate. Adair's car burst suddenly into flames on one of the turns, and he was badly burned. At the hospital, Adair was said to be in a critical condition.

Snyder was among the nation's best known drivers and finished second in the Indianapolis classic last month.

Decided to Punish Tony, Champion Joe Claims

By Hype Igoe
NEW YORK, June 30—Joe Louis changed his mind about trying for a one-round knockout over Tony Galento ten minutes before he entered the ring at the Yankee Stadium. The bomber, keen for running up a string of first round knockout blasts, suddenly decided, it was revealed today, to "fool around with that man and give him a little going over," all because of the names Tony had been hurling.

"I didn't mean to end it as soon as I did, but after getting clouted in the first round and then floored in the third round, I decided to wipe him out," Joe said. "The punch which shook me in the first round was a right-hander high on the temple. The punch which knocked me down in the third, a left hook, wasn't hard. That crack in the first was a sweetie," said the champion.

Every writer around the ring tabbed the punch which shook Louis so badly as a left hook to the top of Joe's right cheek bone, and in evidence today to prove the punch landed there, I jotted down a note at the time that the punch had raised a welt under the eye.

"I just got a notion to let him stick around a little," Joe repeated. "Was it because you wanted to give the crowd a run for its money?"

Might Be Going Yet
"No, it wasn't that. I just changed my mind, that's all. I knew I'd knock him out, but I changed my mind about making it fast. The fight might be going yet if he hadn't knocked me down."

There is an old story that Tex Rickard coaxed Jack Dempsey to spare Georges Carpentier a few rounds when they met at Boyle's Thirty Acres and Jack was almost knocked out trying to do Tex a favor. If Joe Louis was doing anybody a favor in the Yankee stadium at the last minute it probably is the last one he'll ever hand out while he is champion. Boy, he had a close shave!

RED BIRDS MEET COLONELS AFTER DEFEAT 3 TO 2

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 30—The Columbus Red Birds were to arrive in Louisville today for a series opener with the Colonels after dropping the second of a two-game stand to the Indians at Indianapolis.

The Ohio team was nosed out by the Indians 3 to 2. The game followed a twilight exhibition contest which Indianapolis lost to the Cincinnati Reds of the National League 3 to 2.

Nubs Kleinke, Red Bird pitcher, held Indianapolis down until the eighth inning, when a triple with one man on base cinched the game.

Meanwhile, the Minneapolis Millers moved to within one-half game of first position in the American association by defeating the Brewers at Milwaukee 6 to 0.

The circuit-leading Kansas City Blues split a double header with the Saints at St. Paul. St. Paul took the opener 11 to 6 and the visitors came back with a 6 to 4 victory in the second game.

Toledo ended its series with Louisville by taking the final game 7 to 4.

Games scheduled today in addition to the Columbus-Louisville contest were: Milwaukee at St. Paul, Kansas City at Minneapolis and Toledo at Indianapolis.

Solomon: a Ruler Who Began Well

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for July 2 is I Kings 3:5-15, the Golden Text being I Kings 3:9, "Give therefore Thy servant an understanding heart to judge people, that I may discern between good and bad.")

WITH THE death of Paul we return in today's lesson to the Old Testament, and study the lives of some of its famous characters. We begin with Solomon, son of David, whose wisdom is a by-word, even today. His reign began well, but he did not always do what was right.

Solomon really got the throne by a trick of his mother's. King David was an old man, nearing his death, and one of his sons, Adonijah, whose mother was Haggith, decided to make himself king. You remember Absalom, the dissolute son, whom David loved so much and who was killed when his horse ran under a tree and his long hair caught in the branches? Well, Adonijah was his younger brother. You see, in those days, kings had several wives, so naturally when the old king was dying, there was a great rivalry among them to place their own sons on the throne.

Solomon's mother was Bathsheba, and to her went Nathan, a prophet, and told her that Adonijah had set himself up as king and was feasting with his followers. "David, the king, knoweth it not," he told her, and then proceeded to direct her as to how she should act. So she went to the king and "made obeisance" before him, and when he asked her what she wanted she said she wanted him to make Solomon his heir to the throne. She also informed him that Adonijah had declared himself king without him, David, knowing about it.

other priests put Solomon on King David's own donkey, and led him forth into the street and anointed him with oil from the altar, and blew on the trumpet announcing that he was king, and all the people said, "God save King Solomon!" Someone went to Adonijah and told him the tidings, and he and all those who had hailed him as king were very much afraid and Adonijah was so frightened that he went and caught hold of the horns of the altar, hoping that his life would be spared if he were in a holy place.

When Solomon heard of it he said, "If he shew himself a worthy man, there shall not an hair of him fall to the earth. But if wickedness shall be found in him, he shall die." Adonijah then came down from the altar and bowed himself before Solomon, who said to him, "Go to thine house."

Now when King David felt he was going to die, he gave Solomon some very good advice. "Be thou strong, therefore," he told him, "and shew thyself a man."

"And keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep His statutes, and His commandments, and His judgments, and His testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself."

"And Solomon loved the Lord, walking in the statutes of David his father." And he went to Gibeon, because it was "the great high place" and offered burned offerings on the altar. And while he was at Gibeon he dreamed that God came to him and said, "Ask what shall give thee?"

Now Solomon was only about 17 or 18 years of age at this time, and he felt very young and inexperienced, so he answered: "I am but a little child, I know not how to go out or come in; Give therefore Thy servant an understanding heart to judge Thy people, that I may discern between good and evil for who is able to judge this Thy so great a people?"

The Lord Pleased
This speech pleased the Lord because Solomon had not asked things for himself, so he told him he would be the wisest king that ever was and also would be rich and famous.

Do you know the story of the two women who came to Solomon with a dead and a living child, each claiming that the living was theirs? King Solomon told them they should cut the child in two and each take half, well knowing that the real mother never would allow her child to be harmed, but would rather give it to the other woman. And so it was, the real mother pleading that the child's life be spared even if she had to give him up to the other, and the imposter willing that the baby should die. The king, of course gave the child alive to its own mother.

So wise was Solomon that his sayings were quoted all over the civilized world. The beautiful Queen of Sheba heard of him and went with a great retinue and many gifts to see him. She asked him many hard questions and he answered every one; so she went home amazed at his wisdom.

And Solomon built himself a wonderful house and he built the temple, both magnificent structures, and "he spoke three thousand proverbs, and his songs were a thousand and five."

Solomon reigned for 40 years, and then died.

FAYETTE COUNTY MAN ORDERED TO STATE JAIL

GEORGETOWN, June 30 — Edwin F. Jones, of Washington C. H. today was sentenced to a minimum of four years in the Ohio penitentiary on seven counts of obtaining money under false pretense of which he was found guilty by a jury in the Brown County courts a short time ago.

Sentence was pronounced after Judge J. Walter Bagby had overruled a motion for a new trial, filed by Ray R. Maddox, of Washington C. H., who represented Jones.

Judge Bagby sentenced Jones one to three years on the first count, and then sentenced him for one to three years, to run consecutively, on three other charges.

Counts three and five were combined into one; counts seven and nine were combined into one, and counts 11 and 13 were combined into one, making four separate sentences, each for one to three years and each to run consecutively, or, in other words, as soon as one term ends, the next term begins.

Unless appeal is made to the higher courts, Jones, it was indicated, will be removed to the penitentiary Friday or Saturday. He has been in the county jail here since he was found guilty of the crimes.

Jones' father, Henry W. Jones, and brother, Perrill Jones, jointly indicted with him, were found not guilty by the jury, all having been tried at the same time.

Jones is alleged to have obtained around $6,000 from Dr. George B. Tyler of Ripley, by representing that he had a large farm for sale, and obtaining a series of down payments and keeping the money.

His license as a real estate dealer was revoked last Fall after a series of charges had been filed against him by various persons.
